FDA Launches Online Portal for Animal Product Export

The Food & Drug Administration's Center for Veterinary Medicine (CVM) announced June 22 the launch of a new online system that will enable animal food, drug and device manufacturers to apply for, track and receive export certificates electronically for the first time. According to the announcement, manufacturers exporting products from the U.S. are often asked by foreign customers or foreign governments to supply a "certificate" for products regulated by FDA. FDA's export certification provides the agency's official attestation concerning a product's regulatory or marketing status based on available information at the time FDA issues the certificate. The new portal and electronic process will reduce the amount of time it takes for a manufacturer to apply for and receive export certificates.

The American Feed Industry Assn. (AFIA) and the California Grain & Feed Association (CGFA) applauded the "long-awaited major milestone," noting that it will bring about improved trade for U.S. animal food products abroad.

The federal agency announced that it will start issuing Current Good Manufacturing Practice (CGMP) certificates to animal food manufacturers looking to export feed, feed ingredients and pet food products, making it possible for facilities located across America to obtain these certificates for export where and if required and eliminating inconsistencies in state regulations.
